PURITANICAL EATING.

The Feats of Our Forefathers—Clams and Hot Rum Their Favorite Indulgences.

"This venerable society," said James Parton, at a recent meeting of the New York Historical Society, "has seen fit for many years to hold feasts, especially in June, when the festive strawberry goldens the heart of man." He had asked, "Why this collation every month? What connection between strawberries and history?" But a venerable member had roared him, saying gravely, "Let no man speak disrespectfully of strawberries here, for sandwiches built this house." [Applause.] One of the first acts of the Puritans in 1622 was to abolish that most time honored and beloved feast, Christmas. Some of them had met the observance of the day with a mixture of conscience, and the Governor had said, "I think they should be better informed, but he had forbidden public games on that day." But in truth the Puritans never succeeded in abolishing Christmas, although they no longer observed it openly, according to the old chronicles. They had simply changed the date on which it had been observed for 1000 years, and observed it after the old fashion—on the last Thursday of November.

The Puritans had little to make merry with. For years they had nothing to drink but water, and often the only meal was a lobster, with nothing to make a salad of. Then it was that the little clam made its appearance in history. But often when the Puritans had made ready a feast of ground nuts and clams, the Indians would come and eat it. To put a stop to these breaches of etiquette, the Puritans brought a man, not an Indian—that would not have been strange or original—but they hang-dog one of their own number for stealing from an Indian. In this tragic way the clam appeared in history. In this proud and haughty town the venter of the clam, and even the horse who draws his load, are often mentioned in terms of disparagement, but it is far otherwise in New England, where they have "annual Episcopal clam-bakes."

When America began to export rum and tobacco and codfish, the people of the country lived extravagantly. Bringing molasses from the West Indies, they soon learned to make rum of it, and rum became a circulating medium; but rum and tobacco soon vitiated the feasts of our forefathers. It was at the meetings of the clergy, of tobacco and the storm of hot rum. If any one supposed that in a moment the people were more and more vicious than they are now, let him examine the records of the society, and he would soon find the rum, to begin with error. John Adams, in this time temperance movement in the country, records that the price of rum was in those times a small "gallon, though sometimes it was raised to a pretense (which was nine pence," interpreted Mr. Parton), and in small towns there would be a dozen rum taverns, which were alarmingly injurious to the people. Other records show similar facts. From reading Franklin's memoirs, the lecturer, in common with others, had thought that sage a temperance man. But the sagacious Franklin, who knew well what to tell, omitted to state that after he became a prosperous gentleman he was no longer a teetotaler.

The absurd and barbarous habit of drinking health was observed to all its rigor, but even this was to be preferred to the starchy habit of modern times. Later, tea and coffee came in fashion, though chocolate had preceded these dainties in the popular favor, and the chocolate was commonly boiled with saucages, and the whole mass eaten with a spoon. The coffee in olden times was probably very bad, and even as late as John Randolph's time there was ground for his immortal remark, "Walter, if this is tea, bring me coffee; if this is coffee bring me tea."

In the time of the Revolution, while the army was starving at Valley Forge, the people in the great cities were living in luxury and extravagance; and later, when the commerce of the country was pouring in wealth, the style of living was incredibly luxurious. The consequences of this extravagance were serious. For one thing it broke up President Washington's Cabinet. Dinners did it. The salaries of the secretaries were all insufficient to keep up that style of living that was thought necessary. This fact afforded the speaker an opportunity for a long disquisition on Washington morality, which he pronounced to be marvelously pure. "Nine men out of ten, and ten women out of ten," he said, "have observed the requirements of their positions."

Returning to the subject of the food, he said that the art of cooking was often lost and utterly resolved into the use of the frying pan. Missionaries had come over the sea to restore the high and simple cookery of our ancestors. One of the first of these was Delmonico, whose highest praise was that he cooked good food without spoiling it. There had been various quaint gastronomic clubs that had done much to preserve the traditions of cookery. He then described some of the various forms of rustic sociable parties such as knitting-bees, cake walks, calico parties, neck tie receptions, etc., omitting, however, all mention of the barbecues—the glorious and ever-honored feast of the West and South for generations past.

STATE UNIVERSITY.

Its Past, Present and Future.

Last Wednesday afternoon the long term of the Preparatory Department of the State University closed with a public examination extending over two days. It is not out of order at this epoch in the history of the school to give an outline of what has been accomplished in it. It was established here three years ago. Only seven pupils were then found in Elko with whom to start the institution. Of these there are five in attendance now, who can hardly be recognized, in the matter of scholastic attainment, as the same individuals. They have advanced further than, and quite as thoroughly as, any pupils in the other schools of Nevada. This is not only a fact, but after full investigation into the status of public school education throughout the State. In mathematics, especially, the most advanced scholars of the University are clearly beyond, as they ought to be, any other pupils in Nevada. Nor has their development lacked symmetry. In other proper branches, of which mathematics may stand as a criterion, their mental growth has been brought about on the rational basis of natural bias and capacity. Pupils who have been coming in gradually since, chosen for admission on account of remarkable advancement or special talent, and who swelled the number in attendance, at one time during the term, to thirty-two, are a grade below the older members, but following fast in their wake and eager, also, to work out places for themselves in the front rank. The late review, comprising all the main features of the work of the term, shows unmistakably what can be done in building up a school under disadvantages, and in firmly rooting a State institution by constantly elevating the standard of scholastic attainment. The familiarity with the principles of our government which the pupils of the University evinced, in the most pleasing manner, when required to analyze the Constitution of the United States, has been noticed and commented upon in a manner most flattering to the pupils, and to their able and talented instructor, Professor Sessions.

It is not necessary to enter further into details unless to mention one other prominent phase of the advancement of the students at the University. The closing exercises consisted of essays read by their composers. A large number of compositions, on subjects differing as widely as the extremes of the world almost, were rendered for the entertainment and criticism of a large audience of cultivated gentlemen and ladies. The reading brought out many comments, smiles and compliments. One of the listeners gave his opinion in a very terse manner, which seemed to be the same in spirit with the notions held by a "latter," that no better advertisement of the University could be devised than to publish abroad all the essays read by them on the last day of commencement. Proper efforts will be made, during the vacation of two months, to secure for the school a becoming publicity in the various counties of the State, especially, however, in the adjoining ones. The grounds have been handsomely improved by the culture of alfalfa and three hundred poplar trees, which, watered by a neat system of ditches, are growing beautifully. The dormitory is comfortably furnished, is a real home for pupils, and offers attractions of comfort and economy that compare well with those institutions put out to encourage foreign schools to the disparagement of our own.—Elko Post, 30th.

STATE NEWS.

At the election for Mining Recorder at Tuscarora on Tuesday, W. J. Muncey was chosen over two competitors, he having received 153 votes out of a total cast of 399.

Monday afternoon about 2 o'clock John W. Day, an old resident of Virginia City, by trade a machinist and engineer, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart with a navy revolver.

Virginia City still complains of high rents.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Overman Mining Company for the election of officers, etc., will be held at the office of the company, in San Francisco, on the 12th of the present month.

The Belmont Postmaster has official information that the mail service between Eureka and Tybo will be increased to three times a week from July 1, 1877, continuing to July 30, 1878. So says the Courier.

The Belmont Courier says Belmont was unusually lively last week "and is likely to be so for years to come, outside reports to the contrary, notwithstanding."

The total yield of the California mine for June is $1,567,930 43, thus assuring the usual dividend of $1,080,000 and leaving a liberal surplus for running expenses.

The Consolidated Virginia has shipped on June account of $897,827 34. She has yet one week to run her mills and her final clean-up to add to the amount, which will also make enough to pay her dividend.

THE CARSON MINT.

A Carson friend of the Grass Valley Union writes as follows concerning the business of the mint for the past year:

The annual clean-up, which has just been concluded under the supervision of Special Treasury Agent Davis, has been highly satisfactory to all concerned, and shows a gratifying increase of business for former years. The following table gives the coinage for the year just closed, showing an increase of upwards of three quarters of a million over the previous year:

The excess of silver coinage, especially of subsidiary or small silver over gold is explained by the fact that the Mint has run the greater part of the year on half dollars, quarters and dimes, which have been sent East to reduce fractional currency. The coinage of trades the coming year will far exceed that of the year just closed, and with the new Ajax press the Mint could turn out daily fifty thousand trade dollars, but owing to the light adjusting force the actual coinage will run considerably below that figure. The present force of adjusters can adjust, by very close work, 15,000 trade dollars daily. During the year the Melter and Refiner has worked about six million ounces of silver and one hundred and eighty thousand ounces of gold; his loss, like that of the Coiner, falling far below the legal limit. Taken altogether the Carson Mint has done a good year's business, and the Superintendent and his assistants have reason to be proud of the year's work.

The Austin Reveille perpetrates this: The Central Pacific Railroad Company has made another ten per cent. reduction in the wages of its employees. It is understood that the Company has in training a number of men to learn to live on a soda cracker and one dried apple a day, and when they acquire proficiency in starving themselves they will be installed in the places of the present force. The training of this force of men involves so large an expense that the Company will probably be forced to increase the rates of fares and freight.

THAT BALTIMORE CASE.

There is something we do not understand about the removal of Collector Wilkins, of Baltimore. The President and Secretary of the Treasury should explain the cause of his summary dismissal of the service, else the people will think that civil service reform, as mapped out by the Administration is an immense fraud. In other words civil service when it comes our way. The facts in this case briefly stated are that Sherman asked Wilkins to resign, at the same time assuring him of the President's respect for his character. Wilkins declines to tender his resignation saying, in effect, that if the President is satisfied with his honesty and integrity, he appeals to the records of his office as to his faithfulness and efficiency—hence, the resignation is in violation of civil service. The President appoints his successor and suspends Mr. Wilkins without further notice. Then comes the query, "What on?" Let us hear from you Mr. Hayes.

GROVER AND HIS GOLD.

Senator Morton and the Senate Committee are investigating Grover, of Oregon, and the evidence so far elicited leads to the belief that Grover's money was used to elect him Senator. It is shown that six legislators went over to him at the eleventh hour, and the evidence is strong that $6,000 changed hands at the same hour. Nesmith, an opposing candidate, tells several little stories relating to the subject, and though several of the webfoot witnesses are afflicted with treacherous memories, it is pretty clear that Grover's money elected him. If the Committee report such to be the fact, and the Senate expels Mr. Grover for corruption and bribery it would be rough on us, for the country might wish to know how much it takes to become a Senator from Nevada.

AN OUTRAGE.

Ex-Gov. Chamberlain, of South Carolina, was the 4th of July orator at Woodstock, Conn., and took a mean advantage of his position to gratify his personal feelings by an outrageous review and abuse of the acts of President Hayes. This causes us to admit that our estimate of the man has been entirely wrong. At such a time Mr. Chamberlain's remarks were entirely uncalled for and unjust, and we do not wonder that his audience spit upon him by cheering for Hayes.

GRANT AND THE LABORING MEN.

A deputation of forty men, representing different trades and representing altogether about 1,000,000 English workmen, waited on ex-President Grant at Consul General Badeau's residence on Tuesday and presented him an address welcoming him to England, and assuring him of their good wishes and deep regard for the welfare and progress of America, where British workmen had always found a welcome. Impromptu speeches were then made by members of the deputation, all of which were extremely cordial. Grant replied as follows:

In the name of my country I thank you for the address you have presented to me. I feel it to be a great compliment paid to my government and one to me personally. Since my arrival on British soil I have received great attentions, which were intended, I feel sure, in some way, for my country. I have had ovations, free handshakings, presentations from different classes—from the government and from the controlling authorities of cities—and have been received in cities by the populace, but there has been no reception which I am prouder of than this to-day. I recognize the fact that whatever there is of greatness in the United States, is, indeed, in any other country, is due to labor. The laborer is the author of all greatness and wealth. Without labor there would be no government or no leading class or nothing to preserve. With us, labor is regarded as highly respectable, and when it is not so regarded it is because men dishonor labor. We recognize that labor dishonors no man, and no matter what a man's occupation is he is eligible to fill any post in the gift of the people. His occupation is not considered in selecting him, whether a law maker or an executor of law. Now, gentlemen, in conclusion, all I can do is to renew my thanks for your address and repeat what I have said before—that I have received nothing from any class since my arrival which has given me more pleasure.

A delegation of Pinte Indians, headed by chief Natchez, visited General McDowell in San Francisco on the forenoon of the third and later in the day paid their respects to Mayor Bryant, and signified their desire to join the procession on the 4th.

CALIFORNIA'S CEREAL CROPS.

Friedlander's annual grain circular is an exhaustive review of the California harvest season of 1876-77, and our farmers may be interested with a portion of it, which we herewith present. The two mistakes of the year were in overrating the surplus for export, and in supposing tonnage would be insufficient. Mr. Friedlander observes: "Between the two mistakes the trade lost a magnificent opportunity, and unfortunately it passed without profit to any one." With regard to current crops, the circular adds:

We are now entering upon a new crop, and it may not be out of order while giving our best judgment as to its amount and quality, to take a glance at the probable future of the market. The planting season was a most unpropitious one, very few districts in the State having been favored with sufficient moisture to enable the farmers to get their crops properly in the ground, while in many—and those most extensive—not enough rain fell all through the winter to admit of plowing at all. Even in the most favored districts the amount that fell was barely sufficient to make the crop, and in these only the best cultivated fields give a full yield. In many parts volunteer and winter sown grain was an entire failure, and all through the southern part of the State, the fields were bare, except in a few spots where irrigation was practiced. A sort of blight or mildew too overtook the crop during the Spring, attacking the best of grain; and although the damage proved less than was at one time feared, there is no doubt that it shortened the crop in a measure. The estimates of yield are of course very much varied, some placing our surplus for export as high as 350,000 to 400,000 tons of 2,000 lbs. This is, however, almost universally considered altogether too high; but many believe we will have 250,000 to 300,000 tons. We ourselves look on the first of these as an extreme, and are not disposed to put it at even 200,000 tons. The quality of the grain promises to be fully up to the average, and as the bulk of the crop will be grown in the northern part of the State, the proportion of strictly white wheat will be larger than usual. As to the future of prices of coarse nothing positive can be said, the whole depending on the course of the Liverpool market, but it is certain that farmers will be very slow sellers and unwilling to submit to the range of prices which are likely to rule. Already they are in many cases making arrangements to store their grain; and although such a course must seem extremely impolitic to those who survey the entire field, the farmer only thinks of his having seen $3 25 paid for wheat within a year period, and to the fact that his own crop is a very short one. How the English market can rule high with good growing weather all over Europe, and a splendid show throughout the northwest, and a largely increased acreage in India, it is hard to see, yet the decline may, and probably will be slower than many anticipate, for in all countries reserves seem to be exhausted and a large quantity will be required for the supply of immediate local wants.

The Oregon wheat crop of 1876-77 was on the whole not up to the average in yield, nor in the quality of the grain; but the one now ripening will undoubtedly be the largest ever harvested in that State, and from what we can learn there is no reason to doubt that it will be a superior one in every respect. While we in California suffered from a most disastrous drought the season there was, and has continued to be, most propitious. It is somewhat difficult to say what the surplus for export will be, but we shall not be surprised if it reaches 150,000 to 200,000 tons.

Our exports of barley during the cereal year were large, amounting to 551,000 cwt. This is the largest amount we ever sent away from the State, with two exceptions. Almost all of it found its way to the States east of the Rocky Mountains, although a small proportion was sent to South America, New Zealand and the Australian Colonies. The crop was a very profitable one to the farmers all through the State.

Considerable difference of opinion exists as to the character of the crop now about ripe. A considerable breadth of the tule land, never before broken up, has been planted in barley, which will go towards making up the deficiency caused by the failure of the crop in the Southern portion of the State. If we calculate the entire yield at two-thirds of what we produced last year, we probably will not be far out of the way.

The biggest loaf of bread ever baked in the State of Nevada was on exhibition on the 4th in front of the American bakery, No. 11 South C street, Virginia. It was eight feet long and in proportion.
